In History, Y1 has been investigating the 1911-1912 Antarctic expedition of explorer Captain Robert Falcon Scott. Children have been discussing and examining the main reasons as to why Scott's expedition ended in failure. It was decided that Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen (whose team beat Scott and his men to the South Pole) was better prepared in every way.

Children have worked hard to develop their historical skills, learning how to order factors according to their importance. More importantly, children have had to work in teams to reach their conclusions.
