In English, Y1 has been reading Man On The Moon by Simon Bartram and has written 'A day in the life of Bob', an astronaut whose job it is to keep the moon clean and tidy after all the other astronauts and space tourists have visited. Not only that, Y1 also wrote 'A day in the life of Usura', about an alien (and others like her) who Bob doesn't think exists - even though we, the reader, can see them throughout the book!

In Geography, Y1 has been investigating the Great British weather. We've learned the names of the four seasons and have identified the types of weather we may expect in spring, summer, autumn and winter. Y1 has also learned the name of the instrument used to record temperature (the thermometer) and is beginning to read it accurately. Y1 has also discussed how dangerous extreme weather can be and how to recognise it.
